The OHIO ALUMNUS

May - 1946

From the Editor's Desk . . .

GOOD WORK, VETS Not many months ago colleges and universities throughout the land were holding conferences and calling in experts on how to receive and handle the veteran upon his return to the campus after soul-trying and often body-shattering experiences abroad. In fact, Ohio University was the first school to organize a conference on "The Returning Veteran," a conference participated in by high Army officials and by civilians representing national and state agencies. This conference was used as a pattern for similar conferences held all over the country.

In those early days the home folks feared their inability to cope with the "problems" that would attend the return of the service men. In the interest of the men—and in their own interest—they wanted to prepare to help the boys make their "adjustments" as rapidly and satisfactorily as possible, meanwhile, fearing the worst.

Well, it didn't hurt us to take stock of ourselves a bit and to prepare to meet the veterans in any of the new and fearsome relationships that were contemplated—but now we find that most of our fears were groundless.

True, there may be a few "psychopaths" among those who have returned from the fighting fronts to their roles as students and there are a few "hell raisers" who can't restrain an occasional impulse to let off steam, but there were men of these types before the war and in perhaps as great numbers as now.

It is an almost universal report from the colleges, however, that the veterans are not only proving themselves to be no problems, but that they are the most serious-minded, industrious, and scholastically successful groups on the campuses.

What Harvard reported in a June issue of LIFE magazine, Ohio University can substantiate from its own experience, namely, that "they [the veterans] are the best students in the college's history."

President Baker has described the classroom achievements of the veterans at Ohio University as a "great contribution" to the institution, and the men, themselves, as a "serious, conservative, hard-working group who are above the average in scholarship."

DANGER AHEAD War machines and atomic bombs are not the only things that intelligent people should be worrying about these days. Race suicide—at least on the part of that portion of the race that college-trained people like to think of as the top or the cream—is decidedly something to give us pause.

Two hundred years ago an average of five children survived to maturity for each college graduate, but this number has fallen progressively. A recent study of men's colleges showed that for the classes of 1916 to 1920, only 1 2/3 children were born per graduate. Results for women's colleges are even lower. If more than two children are necessary for replacement of the parents, a steady shrinkage of the nation's intelligence is suggested. If this continues unchecked, the prospect is alarming.

To secure more widespread information on this subject the Population Reference Bureau of Washington, D. C. this spring instituted a study among 50 leading colleges and universities of the country (including Ohio University) to secure data with which to compare the numbers of children born to the graduates of these various schools, choosing for its purpose the classes of 1921 and 1936 whose members, respectively, were 25 years and 10 years out of college.

A report of this survey is now in the hands of the editor and a digest of it will be published in the October issue of The Ohio Alumnus.

VOL. XXIV MAY, 1946 No. 8

ENTERED as second class matter, October 3, 1927, at the Postoffice at Athens, Ohio, under the act of March 3, 1879.

ANNUAL DUES for membership in the Ohio University Alumni Association are $2.50, of which $1.50 is for a year's subscription to The Ohio Alumnus. Memberships are renewable on October first of each year.

DISCONTINUANCE—If any subscriber wishes his Alumnus discontinued at the expiration of his subscription, notice to that effect should be sent with the subscription, or at its expiration. Otherwise it is understood that a continuance is desired.

REMITTANCE should be made by check or money order, payable to the order of the Ohio University Alumni Association, and mailed to the Association, Box 285, Athens, Ohio.

COVER The art of fencing has been taken up by a number of disabled veterans attending Ohio University. It helps to develop confidence and poise, and to re-educate injured muscles. The cover shows Walter D. Fahnestock of West Englewood, N. J., (left) fencing with Edward deRobert, an Italian student who teaches fencing under the supervision of physical welfare department instructors. Fahnestock's right arm muscles were shot away while piloting a B-24.

Ranco, Incorporated . . .

PROUD master of the beautiful, modernistic home (see picture) that sets high on a hilltop overlooking the Olentangy River north of Columbus and head of Ranco, Inc., Columbus, for many years one of the world's largest builders of thermostatic controls, is Estel C. Rancey, '08, 2-yr.

The 14-room house, a masterpiece of modern construction, was built on a 250-acre tract and embodies features that Mr. and Mrs. Rancey have observed and admired in their travels about the United States. It is distinguished by a glass block stair tower. Overhanging roofs protect the rooms facing the east from the sun and in summer the house is kept cool by water standing four inches deep on the roof. It is air-conditioned inside.

But things were not always so comfortable for Mr. Rancey. He chuckles as he looks back at the days of 1906-08 when he waited table and managed boarding clubs at Ohio University and at other days when, as he readily admits, he used to wonder where the next meal was coming from.

Ranco, Inc., once known as the Automatic Reclosing Circuit Breaker Co., might never have been, had it not been for an unschooled mine engineer who was Mr. Rancey's assistant on his first job, at the East Jefferson mine of the Warner Bros. Coal Co., near Steubenville, in 1903.

When a short circuit occurred somewhere in the mine, a switch would cut off the current automatically. That was fine as far as it went, but it wasn't enough, to the assistant engineer's way of thinking. He figured there should be some way to reclose the circuit breaker on the switchboard in the powerhouse without getting up from his chair and doing it by hand.

"Why can't it close itself?" he grumbled to his boss. "You're a college man. You ought to be able to figure out how to do it."

Fifteen minutes later the boss, just graduated from Ohio University's short course in electrical engineering (as much as was then available), handed him a diagram showing how he believed it could be done. That diagram formed the basis for the first patent Mr. Rancey took out in 1908.

Driven by a desire for more formal education Mr. Rancey, with the aid of the loyal young woman whom he married two months after receiving his diploma, saved every possible cent, moved to Columbus, and by 1912 had acquired degrees from Ohio State University in mechanical and electrical engineering. Mrs. Rancey, by the way, was Myrtle Gallaher and is a former critic teacher in Ohio University's Elementary School.

In the summer of 1911 he made the first workable model of his automatic reclosing circuit breaker. The model from his first patent hadn't worked, but he was sure a new one would. It did—down in Alabama—where, for lack of funds, he was unable to go to witness its success.

Encouraged by the report of the Alabama engineer he approached the large electric manufacturing companies with a view to selling his patent. "Impractical" was the verdict of the big fellows—so he formed a company of his own, on the proverbial shoestring. Its only assets were his inventive genius and his determination. There was no factory, there were no orders, no merchandise.

He scoured the mine districts of Ohio and West Virginia for prospects. He would get an order for a 90-day trial installation, at no cost to the mine, then stop at hardware stores on his way home to buy the parts needed to put the instrument together. Mrs. Rancey laughs to remember how his pockets bulged with screws, nuts, bolts and other assorted hardware.

When it was completed, he went back to install it. Not one of those trial installations was ever removed. Soon there was financial support from far-sighted business men who have been repaid many times over. And it wasn't long before the large companies which had spurned Mr. Rancey's patent were clamoring for it. Today every one of them is using it.

In recent years Ranco has turned to the manufacture of thermostatic controls for refrigerators and automobile heaters.

Many of Mr. Rancey's mechanical innovations come from sketches pencilled in a notebook which he keeps by his bed.

"If he's bothered by a problem when he goes to bed, he'll most likely wake up and try to work it out on paper," Mrs. Rancey says. And to a wifely rebuke that he is prone to go to sleep in church, he replies that he gets some of his best ideas there.

During the war years Ranco produced thousands of delicate pressure gauges for the Army and Navy Air Forces, and a quarter of a million pairs of binoculars for the armed forces.

Two of Mr. Rancey's three sons, Eldon and Robert, are Ranco engineers. The third, Roy, is a Cleveland patent attorney. There is a daughter, Geraldine.

The Rancey Home Near Columbus

Books! Books!

(Bread, sugar, and shirts are not the only things in short supply these days. You can add college text books to the long list of hard to get items. And—believe it or not—the students are as much concerned about the situation as the publishers and retailers.

The following article was written by John L. Douglas of the staff of the Athens Messenger and appeared in his paper under date of April 3. It was based on an interview with William H. Logan, '17x, owner of "Logan's at the Gateway of the Campus."—The Editor.)

COLLEGE TEXT books have ceased being items that students hate to buy. Like butter, they have become a national shortage. Any text book, even if written on "How to Grow Weeds," is likely to be snatched up by the bookmen. Some student will be sure to want it.

William H. Logan, Athens book store owner, says that this has been his toughest year in the business. And he has 25 years of experience to mull over in saying it. Mr. Logan, like most dealers, feels as though he has been living in a tornado for the last six months.

"The rush of veterans to colleges almost wiped out the book stores," Mr. Logan said recently, "and caused the greatest text book shortage in history. More students now have a complete set of books than ever before. One veteran told me that previously he had never bought over half the books he needed. Now, under the G.I. Bill, he has them all. This is probably typical, and is a major reason for the shortage."

There are also three other good reasons, Mr. Logan said. Labor is still scarce. Publishers, with a limited amount of paper, printed books for each course based on previous demands. And the veterans promptly crossed them up.

"Veterans are after a trade or profession," Mr. Logan said. "And aren't taking liberal arts courses. So, publishers have bins full of history books and can't fill orders for commerce and similar books."

Mr. Logan, anticipating the rush, thought he was prepared. He suggested that Ohio University professors make their second semester orders high. Then, after they were in, he suggested another raise. This was done and everyone thought the situation would stay in hand.

The second semester rush almost blew away his store.

It was more than just the flood of students after regular books. They also wanted all types of technical and specialized books for side study. The demand for standard texts exceeded all dreams and the supply vanished quickly. Mr. Logan started sending telegrams.

In the first three days he sent $95 worth of telegrams. Obscure book stores, several states away, were startled to find they could sell any college text they had in stock. Some professors had to change their text books three or four times before enough books could be found. In the end, almost every class was supplied, but it had been a tight race.

The stampede, if nothing else, added to Mr. Logan's text book education. He dazedly found himself ordering books he didn't know existed from companies he had never heard of. Orders for specialized books of all kinds crowded his desk.

"Agricultural books are a good example," he said. "Normally we order perhaps three copies on a single phase of agriculture. Now we need 20. I never knew so many books could be written on single phases of such things as horticulture."

Veterans' hobbies have also jammed up the book channels. Overnight, photography has become a popular subject. The demand for such books had always been light and now the stock has vanished quickly. It seems that students want to learn every angle of photography and the books are still rare.

Foreign languages are also getting an unexpected play. Veterans swore they would never leave these shores again. But if they do, they apparently don't want to get caught speechless as they were this time. Mr. Logan sometimes feels that he has contacted every person he even suspects might have a foreign language book. And the supply is still short.

"Competition is terrific," Mr. Logan said, "Every shop needs books. One store in Columbus is selling out books it has had for years and never expected to sell. Minutes count in getting off telegrams when you learn the location of some books. If you wait an hour they will be gone."

Right now Mr. Logan feels that he has his situation over 90 per cent whipped. But he feels somewhat like a man who has just pinned an alligator. It may get up and bite him again.

"I count on another big rush this fall and have placed large orders," he said. "They have already started coming in so I believe we will be ready. But, if the enrollment of veterans exceeds expectations, the battle will be on again."

LOGAN'S — At the Gateway of the Campus

On and About the Campus . . .

FEATURED by a number of conferences, clinics, special programs, and, of course, broad offerings for the G. I.'s, the 1946 Summer School has attracted the largest attendance, of any eight-week summer session in the history of the university. Some shorter, six-week sessions a score of years or more ago were marked by attendances that topped the 2,000 mark.

The 1946 Summer School director is Dr. Rush Elliott, '24 (see picture), professor of anatomy. After graduation from Ohio University Dr. Elliott continued on at his alma mater as an instructor in his field of specialization. He advanced in rank until he attained a full professorship in 1938. He received his A.M. degree from Ohio State University in 1926 and his Ph.D. degree from the University of Michigan in 1930. He has also engaged in graduate work at Cornell University and at the Franz Theodore Stone Laboratory at Put-in-Bay. He was an instructor in anatomy at the University of Michigan in the summer of 1929.

Director Elliott is secretary of the Ohio Academy of Science, and holds membership in the American Association for the Advancement of Science, American Association of Anatomists, American Microscopical Association, and the honorary scholastic fraternity, Phi Beta Kappa. He is the husband of the former Frances Gray, '26, A.M. '31, and the father of three children, Margaret, Suzanne, and Eugene.

TWO OF THE outstanding conferences of the Summer School have been the fifth annual two-day conference on "Conservation, Nutrition and Human Health," sponsored by Friends of the Land, and Ohio University's School of Journalism three-day conference on high school publications. This is the second consecutive year that Ohio University has been host to the first of these conferences. As last year, the current conference brought to the campus some of the nation's leading figures in the conservation field. Among the speakers were: The Rev. Father Leo Ward, professor of philosophy, Notre Dame University; Guy

Burch, Population Reference Bureau director, Washington, D. C.; Dr. William Albrecht, head of the department of soils, and Dr. Emil Truog, professor of agronomy, both of the University of Wisconsin; Dr. Edward Graham, chief biologist, U. S. Soil Conservation Service, Washington, D. C.; Lachlan Macleay, president, Mississippi Valley Association, St. Louis, Mo.; Dr. Alice Chenoweth, Kentucky State Department of Health; and Dr. Jonathon Forman, Columbus, editor of the Ohio State Medical Journal and vice-president of Friends of the Land. Other speakers were present from Pennsylvania, Virginia, Tennessee, Florida, and Missouri. Dr. C. L. Dow, professor of geology at Ohio University, conducted a field trip and presided over one of the sessions of the conference.

Approximately 100 high school students and faculty advisors registered for the journalism conference. The program, arranged by Prof. George Starr Lasher, director of the School of Journalism, included round-table discussions, publications clinics, demonstrations, and visits to the university's photography laboratory, The Lawhead Press, and The Athens Messenger. Sigma Delta Chi and Theta Sigma Pi, journalism fraternity and sorority, respectively, entertained the high school visitors with a dance on one evening of their stay.

THE APPOINTMENT of assistant directors of Ohio University's Portsmouth Branch and Zanesville Branch have been announced. Ralph Elliott, '35, dean of boys at Portsmouth High School, and Ellis B. Miracle, '29, supervisor of industrial arts in the Zanesville schools, were the men named to these positions. As assistant directors they will act as liaison officers in operation of their respective branches with Prof. Albert C. Gubit, in Athens, who is director of all branches. The appointment of Thomas J. Vernia as assistant director of the new Chillicothe Branch has been previously announced. One of the first jobs of the assistant directors will be to locate housing in their localities for the several hundred students expected to enroll in the branches, where courses will be offered in all fields given on the campus in Athens.

Mr. Elliott joined the Portsmouth high school faculty in 1944 after having taught in nearby New Boston High School for 22 years. Mr. Miracle has been a member of the faculty of Zanesville High School for 19 years.

PAUL R. O'BRIEN, '32, an examiner in the State Auditor's office, Columbus, has been appointed controller for Ohio University. From 1932 to 1937, Mr. O'Brien was office manager of a wholesale grocery firm in Gallipolis, his home town. He has held a position in the state auditor's office since 1937, with the exception of three years spent in the Army. As a captain in the A.A.F. he was attached to the Fifth Fighter Command and saw two years of service in the Pacific where he earned four battle stars. The new controller is married and has a son, Robert. The youngster was born 12 years ago on a night when his father, as president of the Gallipolis alumni chapter, was presiding at the annual dinner meeting of the Gallia County group.

DR. ARTHUR M. HARDING, president of the University of Arkansas and a well-known lecturer on astronomy, addressed the opening Summer School convocation on "Glimpses of Other Worlds."

The Bobcat Sports Review

By Ralph Stone Smith

OHIO UNIVERSITY'S stellar shortstop, bespectacled Charles "Chuck" Horn of Crooksville, played on the Mid-West College All-Star baseball team that lost to the East All-Stars by 6-2.

Horn was one of 22 college baseballers chosen to represent the Mid-West in the first annual East-West game. It was played in Boston on June 14.

The 19-year-old athlete, who sparked the Bobcat infield this spring, handled one fielding chance flawlessly in the four innings he was in the All-Star fray. He batted twice, walking once and was safe the second time up on a fielder's choice.

Being chosen to represent Ohio U. was a deserved honor as Horn was described by Coach Don C. Peden as "probably the best all-around infielder on the team this year and a very fine lefthanded hitter."

His batting average in 19 games this season was .304 and he fielded .941. Last year he hit .423 and fielded .948 in 11 tilts. He has been a lot of help in laying down bunts and sacrificing baserunners along.

Winner of two letters in baseball, Horn throws with a quick underhand movement and loses no time getting the ball away. He throws right-handed but is a southpaw with the bat.

Shortstop "Chuck" Horn

A sophomore in the College of Fine Arts, Chuck's grades have been about average. He is five feet nine inches tall and weighs 159 pounds. He made two letters in football, two in baseball and four in basketball at Crooksville high school.

After graduation he hopes to play professional baseball with the Boston Red Sox. This summer he is playing with a Zanesville nine.

TWENTY-NINE OHIO University athletes have been awarded letters for their part in spring sports.

Twelve members of the Bobcat baseball team that won 12 out of its 13 regular season games, and 17 men on the track team that copped five out of six dual meets were given letters.

Dr. C. L. Dow, chairman of the athletic board, announced the Green and White winners.

Baseball letters were awarded to: Pitchers — Charles Burdette, Akron, and John Jurkovic, Canton.

Infielders—John Bishop, Youngstown; Bill Brooks, Carbondale; Jack Singerman, Tiltonville; Charles Horn, Crooksville; and Bill Turk and Gene Ruskowski, both of Cleveland.

Outfielders—John Madden, Tiltonville; King Brady, Yakima, Wash.; Charles Traeger, Cleveland; and Ralph Sayre, New Haven, W. Va.

Track letters went to: Mac Baas, Deer Park, Cincinnati; Bill Cowden, Lakewood; Gordon Cox and Fred Schleicher, Cleveland; Harry Cox, Danville, Ill.; Bob Greenwood, Cleveland Heights; Bill Benson, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Bob Hanna, Mt. Lebanon, Pa.

Bill Hartman, Canal Winchester; Allan McCune, Stewart; Chris Stefan, Dayton; Charles Ogg, Stewart; Bill Kuhner, Jackson; Seemen Rose, Erie, Pa.; Herb McElfresh, Zanesville; John Nolan, Bowerston; and Henry Saulnier, Swarthmore, Pa.

Burdette, ace moundsman, won baseball letters in 1942 and 1943 before he entered the service. He is the only member of the Bobcat nine not expected to be back for the baseball team next spring. He is pitching for the Springfield (Ill.) Browns this summer.

Horn, Traeger, Turk, Ruskowski, and Sayre had earned one baseball letter previously, all of them for the

Broadcaster Tom Slater

1945 season except Traeger, who was awarded a green sweater in 1943 before service in the Army.

Kuhner, Hartman and Schleicher made one track letter each before they returned to the campus this year after duty in the armed forces.

All letterman thinclads are eligible for more collegiate competition and are scheduled to return next fall.

TOM SLATER, Ohio University student from 1926 to 1928, has received the 1946 Radio Daily Award for his sports broadcasting.

Director of sports and special events for the Mutual Broadcasting System, Slater was given a silver trophy for the "person who has done most to bring credit and honor to the sports broadcasting profession during the last year."

Previously he had won the 1946 National Headliners Club award for "the best special events broadcast of the year" for his work with Mutual in broadcasting Army experiments in which radar contact was made with the moon.

During the war, in addition to his regular activities, Tom participated in Treasury Department bond drives, blood donor campaigns, and camp entertainment all over the country, for which he received the Treasury Department Silver Medal. He was made an "honorary colonel" by the officers and men of Fort Dix, N. J., for his organization and long-time production of the radio program, "This Is Fort Dix."

Here and There Among the Alumni

Mrs. Carl D. Sheppard, wife of STATE SENATOR CARL D. SHEPPARD, Akron, suffered burns and a narrow escape from death when the Sheppard's 250-horsepower motor launch exploded, burned, and sank in the waters of Lake Huron on July 5.

1910

The newly-elected president of the Cleveland Bobcat Club, HEBER MCFARLAND, 2-yr., is a director and treasurer of the Martindale Electric Co., manufacturers of electrical equipment; a director of the Forbes Varnish Company; a trustee of Fairview Hospital; and a former president of the Westwood Country Club.

1912

Although an "off" year for a reunion celebration, seven members of the Class of 1912 this June helped maintain the tradition of their group of "some activity every year." The following had breakfast at "The Twin Pines," dinner at Hotel Berry, and attended the graduation exercises together: MRS. HAZEL RIGBY MAST, East Liverpool; C. F. SHARP, Cleveland; and the following Athenians—BESSIE GORSLINE, W. B. CABLE, PROF. H. L. DUNLAP, FRED S. WHEATON, and M. D. HUGHES. All of the male members of the group were accompanied by their wives. Plans were laid for a celebration of the 35th anniversary in 1947.

1913

LEWIS H. MILLER, at present judge of the Fifth Judicial District in West Virginia, has filed a certificate of candidacy with the Secretary of State for a place on the Supreme Court of West Virginia to succeed a judge who has recently died. Judge Miller has six more years of a third eight-year term as circuit judge to serve after January 1, 1947. He has twice sought the Republican nomination for governor of his state.

1915

HARRY C. WILSON, formerly of Cleveland, is now located in Columbus where he is associated with the Central Realty Co. (real estate and business opportunities) at 40 West Gay Street.

1916

GROSVENOR S. MCKEE and Mrs. McKee, Meadville, Pa., have announced the wedding of their daughter, Grace "Terry," to William B. Connors, Newark, N. J., on June 1. Mrs. Connors studied journalism at Duke University and is a former reporter on the Newark (N.J.) Star-Ledger. She and her husband have gone to Shanghai, China, where the latter is director of operations for the U. S. Information Service, formerly the Office of War Administration. MARJORIE MCKEE, Ohio University junior, was her sister's maid-of-honor.

1917

RACHAEL HIGGINS was the director of the second annual play, Somerset Maugham's "Caesar's Wife," presented this spring, under the auspices of the Zanesville Art Institute. Miss Higgins, who has studied dramatics at Columbia University, is a member of the faculty of Lash High School in Zanesville, where she has been dramatic coach for the past ten years. She has appeared in important roles in a number of plays presented by the Zanesville chapter of AAUW and the Zanesville Little Theater Group, of which she was a charter member. Miss Higgins is a daughter of the late DR. C. H. HIGGINS, '87.

Capt. Marie Stone and German Nurses
(See Class of 1935 Notes)

1919

GRANVILLE H. EVANS, ex, and Mrs. Evans (GRACE MCKEE, '19), Belmont, Mass., have announced the marriage of their daughter, Barbara, to Samuel R. Dorrance, Noroton, Conn. Mr. Dorrance is a Princeton graduate, a former AAF officer who spent two years in a German prison camp, and is now a student in the Yale Law School. The bride's gown was trimmed with lace from her great-grandmother's wedding dress.

It may be taken for granted that the public schools of Barnesville are in excellent hands. The reason: SILAS T. WARFIELD is head of the entire city system, while DONALD W. SHEPHERD, '34, is principal of the high school. Superintendent Warfield is a brother of ISSAGAH A. WARFIELD, '24, head of the Somerton schools.

IVAN R. AMERINE, science teacher at Mound Junior High School, Columbus, was elected a vice president of the National Education Association at its convention in Buffalo, New York, in July. Mr. Amerine is president of the Columbus Teachers' Federation.

Mrs. Fred E. Artz (GENEVIEVE MATTOX) attended the June graduation of her oldest son, Dick, from Valley Forge Military Academy at Wayne, Pa. Gene, a former province president of Alpha Xi Delta sorority and a former resident of Marion, is now living in Beaver Falls, Pa.

VANLON PATTON, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lee M. Patton (GERTRUDE WALKER), Northfield, graduated with high honors from Ohio Wesleyan University on July 1. Miss Patton, who attended Ohio University for two years, 1942-1944, has received a graduate scholarship in psychology at Indiana University where she will be a graduate assistant to the dean of women.

NEIL D. THOMAS, associate professor of civil engineering at Ohio University, attended the June meeting, at Washington University, St. Louis, Mo., of the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education, and a national conference of engineering drawing teachers held at the same time and place. Professor Thomas gave a paper on "Plastic Models as Aids in the Teaching of Drawing," illustrated with original models made during the past several years and used in his teaching at Ohio University.

ESTHER WARVEL is an agent of the New York Life Insurance Company in Springfield.

For the first time in ten years all of the members of the family of Prof. L. J. Addicott, retired civil engineering head, were together at the family home in Athens, June 16, to celebrate Father's Day. Here for the occasion were HAROLD B. ADDICOTT, professor of geography at Minnesota State Teachers' College, Moorhead, Minn.; GERTRUDE LOUISE ADDICOTT, '30, a teacher in the Hamilton county schools; and DONALD K. ADDICOTT, '32, who is associated with the General Motors Corp. in Indianapolis. Mrs. Harold Addicott (HELEN PHILLIPS, '25) and sons, Donnie and Johnny, were also members of the reunion party.

The St. Henry (Ohio) High School baseball team was runner-up in the state class "B" championship this spring for the second consecutive year. St. Henry is the only school ever to reach the titular game twice in a row, and the triple play executed by the team in this year's tournament was the first ever recorded in a state tournament. St. Henry has won 75 games and lost only 7 during the past five years. In recognition of all these achievements, A. B. "Happy" Chandler, commissioner of professional baseball, and former U. S. Senator, was secured as the speaker at a dinner honoring the Western Ohio team. ALOYSIUS J. COLLINS is superintendent of the St. Henry schools.

"Like father, like son." ROLLAND S. JONES, plant superintendent of the Athens Home Telephone Co., has been elected vice president of the Ohio Independent Telephone Association. His father, a pioneer telephone man in Ohio, is a former vice president and president of the state organization. The latter missed the OITA meetings this year for the first time in more than 30 years.

HATTIE F. CAMPBELL (see picture), who has been executive secretary of the Brooklyn branch of the YWCA in Cleveland since 1941, has resigned her position to accept the executive directorship of the YWCA in Terre Haute, Indiana. She will assume her new duties on August 1. Miss Campbell has been continuously engaged in "Y" work since her graduation from Ohio University, except for a period during which she earned a master's degree at Columbia University. She has been associated with YWCA organizations in Toledo, Parkersburg, W. Va., Asheville, N. C., and, prior to going to Cleveland, in Troy.

Athletic director in the high school at Terrace Park, near Cincinnati, since graduation, except for a period of service with the Navy as a physical instructor and drillmaster, LESTER L. PATTERSON has resigned his position to accept a similar one in Franklin High School near Boise, Idaho. This summer he is enrolled for graduate work in the University of Idaho at Moscow. Mrs. Patterson and children are currently at Spirit Lake, a two-hour drive from Moscow. The Pattersons expect to build a home on a hill site overlooking Boise at the earliest opportunity.

GORDON D. LOGAN, ex. with United Air Lines for the past 11 years, has been named district traffic and sales manager with headquarters in Cleveland. Mr. Logan has served United at Chicago and Salt Lake City.

On completion of the $54,000,000 Denison (Texas) Dam, JOHN C. DISSLY of the U. S. Engineers was transferred to the Tulsa, Okla. office where he is working on plans for a proposed flood control program.

The professional interests and activities of GREGORY BATTISTONE, a teacher in Western High School, Detroit, Mich., required several inches of columnar space for publication in a recent issue of the Detroit Education News. He is a former secretary of the Intermediate Division of the Detroit Teachers Association, a former chairman of the Professional Problems Committee of this division, and is at present chairman of the Western High School chapter of the Detroit Teachers Association and chairman of the DTA Recruitment of School People for Price Control Boards of OPA. In addition, he is membership chairman of the National Business Teachers Association for the state of Michigan, and a former member of the Advisory Committee on Teachers Tenure and Academic Freedom of the National Education Association.

yr., is a teacher in the Lindsay School, Portsmouth. She became Mrs. Russell W. Cunningham on Sept. 2, 1944.

1932
